Pathfinder: Azure Saga is a new game from Saber Interactive with a unique take on a classic style of D&D role-playing game. "Pathfinder: Azure Saga is an epic action-adventure game, set in the distant future of two closely-cousined empires where mighty blade, bow, and shield are the weapons of choice." Learn More: of infectious bronchitis virus-induced protein-losing enteropathy in chickens. The pathogenesis of infectious bronchitis virus (IBV)-induced protein-losing enteropathy (PLE) in chickens was studied by examining the consequences of depletion of intravascular protein by plasma volume reduction. Peripheral protein depletion was induced by i.v. administration of 0.28 g of 20% saline diatrizoate meglumine/kg body weight of age-matched 8-week-old chickens. Thirteen half-infectious (10(3.8) plaque-forming units/0.1 ml) and seven infectious (10(6.6) plaque-forming units/0.1 ml) IBV strains were administered intranasally to groups of chickens that were killed 3, 5, 7 and 14 days postinfection (pi). Viral titers in the bursa of Fabricius were 1, 9.7 and 2 log(10) greater at 5, 7 and 14 days pi than in the controls. The weight of the proventriculus decreased with both dose and time. The proventriculus: gizzard and intestine weight ratios were 0.53, 0.20 and 0.16 at 3 days pi and 1.06, 0.57 and 0.16 at 14 days pi for all IBV-infected chickens. Fluid-filled intestinal loops were observed on day 7 pi in 10 of 12 chickens that had received 0.28 g of saline. In 8 of 10 chickens that had received 0.28 g of saline and the infectious strain, cobblestones were the most consistent finding of villous atrophy; these lesions were associated with a moderate to marked increase in the lamina propria. Hematocrit values decreased at 5 days pi, but were not significantly different from those of controls. Serial observation of plasma protein concentration of infected chickens revealed that PLE was more closely related to plasma volume loss than to the severity of the disease. A model for the pathogenesis of P

FURTHER ARTFORMAT STUDIO FOCUS - FURTHER DATA We are approaching a new era of progress. Art is flexible in its precision. Spin even further in the future. It is fascinating how we are headed for an amazing turn of this century, a time to present way of thinking & approach that is like no other before. It is possible that we are transitioning a systems approach to meet all our needs in our complexities of present times. Our new technologies are shaping new options for creativity that are so close to reality. It feels like a new day has arrived as we step into the machine age of innovation. It is in our interests to stop, think about the changes we are faced with. The way we look into the future is defining us right now, just as the way we are looking at the past helped to mold us. WHAT WE ARE FACING NOW AS ART Art is much more loose and unpredictable in the forms we present it in. It has become easier and more convenient to the special form of a 3D CAD system. Compared to the 1970's when we struggled to achieve the same effects. It allowed us to have a moving target that became more precise. Now we often question: is this the true form that we create? Animation featuring the new FURTHER AS & ARTFORMAT STUDIO FOCUS 2 design. As we feel more into animation, the computer's ability to draw and sew is quite feasible. This is superb for the potential for more scientific flow-over effect which could be more suitable to achieve this look. It is an interesting time for us to see the shape our world will become in future. We have also got laser and even 3D printers that are continuously improving, which are significant for work flow. Are we ready for this change. And our outlook will determine the success of this journey. We are facing huge social challenges, facing the loss of freedom and education services as well as the question to does creativity have a place in education. Let's not forget that we will be facing a second wave of automation in the service sector, which is now within our reach. And what kind of work with no humanity can this produce? NEXT STEPS What is next? This new era of evolution has the potential to be better than the past,

Q: Rails 3 Custom User Model with Mongoid 4 I have a users table but would like to add a users.pick_frequent_questions field to every user. I want to create a method in my user class that gets the questions passed into the method and makes an array of them. Is this possible with mongoid or is my best option just to create a separate questions table for each user and add the questions by adding fields to the user? I know that the users model is used to save the user object so it seemed weird to go into a separate database table for users. A: This is a question for the Mongoid group if it's OK but there's no lack of answers. The users table is pretty good place to keep questions. Once you set up strong_parameters in your environment.rb file, you can use a where method to filter your questions by answers (Y/N). You may also want to allow answers to comments - that's the preferred way for
