Scintilla (band) Scintilla is an electronic music band formed in Seattle, Washington by brothers David and Jason Chen, who first performed together as teenagers in the metal band Stuck Mojo. Originally named "Toxic", the band changed their name to Scintilla in 2007. History Early years and Toxic (2002-2006) The original Scintilla formed in 2002 as Toxic, a duo with David and Jason Chen on bass and drums, respectively. Around the same time, they formed more experimental and experimental electronic projects, including the groups Stuck Mojo (which was renamed Scintilla) and Stolen Funeral. The band worked in relative obscurity through 2002 and 2003. They then released what was to be their first full-length album, Dodecahedron, in 2004, through Spacelab Records. The band achieved some success in Europe, holding up their own record release parties, and the follow-up disc, Coma Vacuum, came out in March 2005, in Europe and January 2006 in the US. The disc was rereleased in the UK by Unique Recording, and featured the B-side track "Daughter", which would appear on Scintilla's next full-length, 2007's Prisms. This is when the band began to gain a larger indie rock following. They continued to evolve musically, and began working with a wider array of electronic musical elements, and in 2006 and 2007 the band's sound grew increasingly electronic. Around this time, the band introduced a new drummer, Michael Phifs, who has remained part of the group since. Prisms (2007-2008) The band's next full-length, Prisms, was released in November 2006. The album, like Coma Vacuum, was self-released in Europe and independently released in the US. It was engineered by Brian Deck at Platinum Sounds studio. The record features guest vocals by Indian songwriter Ami Shami on "The Jello Set" and "Symphony in B"; there is also a spoken word and guitar-based track by songwriter Tim Jacobus on "Rain." The final track, "Daughter," was originally recorded for a six-song EP that was never released. In April 2007, Scintilla participated in Sonic State radio on WAQY, and were interviewed by Chuck Eddy. Soon after, the band performed at SXSW, and also played at Sunset Tavern and the Victoria

What's New in the?

The Federal Communications Commission's (FCC) decision to deregulate the communications market and throw major corporations under the bus has prompted the ire of everyone from the President on down. In a packed and hectic White House briefing yesterday, President Obama was pressed to answer questions about FCC chairman Julius Genachowski's plans to hand over control of the Internet to an unaccountable corporate behemoth. More than a few attendees, including Republican members of Congress, pointed out that part of their job is to protect the United States from the burdens of big government. Whether or not he could have predicted their tone, Obama answered patiently. It wasn't a sign of weakness to push a controversial policy that has put pressure on his Democratic base, Obama responded. And when it came to the FCC, the president acted with his best sense of national leadership: he sided with the people over the corporations. "Nobody in this room is challenging the Internet's basic architecture, or the Internet's ability to help empower individuals and communities and so forth. But the way in which the Internet is used and shaped is going to be constrained by what kinds of platforms and providers there are on the Internet," Obama told the reporters. "So this is not about a threat to the Internet; it's about making sure that we are making the most effective use of Internet opportunities and protecting some key principles about how we make decisions about what information people receive." Obama called broadband an "absolutely vital" tool for a growing economy. "We're going to continue to do the best we can to figure out how we can drive investment in networks, and encourage service providers to make sure they are investing in fiber," he said. "Let me just say that I have never ever ever heard of anyone who said, 'I don't want people to be connected,'" Obama added. "I have never ever heard of anyone who says, 'I want people to be disconnected.'...I think it's very hard to imagine anybody in this room not having their minds changed by the power of what the Internet can do." It was an upbeat tour de force for the president in the middle of a real and growing debate about Internet freedom. As a free and open society, we need to defend the potential of the Internet to advance our values, in a
